

Customer Review on Pumpkin 6.2 Inch Wince 6.0 Car DVD GPS Navigation 2 Din-W0244

Great head unit, this is the second Pumpkin Double Din I have bought recently and I have not been disappointed. This one I installed in my mothers's car today, (Toyota Corolla). Fitted perfectly, just waiting on fascia to be delivered on Friday. Everything work excellently.

The only niggle and it is only a niggle is the reversing camera is a bit chunky, otherwise OK.

After having used this Pumpkin head unit for almost half a year here are my thoughts:

-Easy to install, very straightforward. The supplied ISO harness clipped straight into the wiring inside the dash on my Panda and literally within five minutes I was listening to music and the radio – make sure you get yourself a radio aerial adapter though if you need one, they're under a pound. The unit doesn't come with a cage so you'll either have to buy one or use your existing one. I used the existing one that was already in my car.

-Great sound. I get much better sound off this than the original.

-Visible in daylight! (convertibles may have troubles tho)

-Touchscreen very responsive.

-GPS is very good at locating you I always have full signal. It takes me on funny routes in Edinburgh... But you can change the software.

-The rear camera is very clear and everything is visible even in low light.

-Bluetooth works like a charm and I can play stuff from my phone and listen to Spotify without any issues. Also the phone functions work well and it is good to be able to dial a number directly from the unit.

, but microphone is very bad.

Only downside is GPS not showing speed limits onscreen which I sometimes have trouble seeing on the road. Also needs exact address. E.g.: cannot write Arthur's seat.

Great little kit, I recommend it highly. Has its flaws but for the money I can't blame it.

Customer Review on Pumpkin
Wince 6.0 Car DVD Player GPS
1 Din

Bought the WinCE 6.0 Car DVD GPS Player with reversing camera, really good product, stereo was easy to connect and set up, camera works great and cable was long enough for my T4 van. Radio has good reception and everything does what it says on the tin. very happy with the stereo overall, at this price you cant go wrong.

So I bought this Pumpkin head unit for my 1980s classic sports car. Looks great has a clean look to it and reminiscent of “Becker Mexico” (in my imagination) so looks better than the original 1980s stereo.

Reversing camera was easy to fit but a little confusing to connect But nothing got damaged during my efforts (but I am relatively competent)

Sat nav is pretty good and so is reversing camera – the two main reasons for wanting to install this for me

You can set up your own wall papers – you need to store them on the Nav card not the card in the spare SD slot

Couldn't get the boot up screen to work at all – never seems to need it... (don't know what that's all about, there is no boot up time)

Quality and finish pretty good.

You can set the screen angle to 1 of 3 positions – you need to cycle through them with a button. It then remembers. Trouble is when first powered up it defaults to vertical not tilt forward so if you have an installation that leans the screen back so that it hits some part of the dashboard you have to slide the unit in after you've set up the screen angle forward and every time it then loses power you have to repeat. not normally a problem but something to be aware of – doesn't seem to mash things when it happens the screen just closes after it hits the dash
